Welcome to the 2012-13 edition of the President's Annual Report

I'm very proud to tell you that the past academic year was one filled with many outstanding student accomplishments, faculty and staff awards, and growth and improvement in many areas of the college. Our students never cease to amaze me. Some are just naturally gifted individuals who achieve at the highest level and aspire to be highly skilled professionals in their chosen career. Others sacrifice time with their families to gain new skills or finish a degree to become more employable in today's competitive job market.

Cowley's goal is to take care of its students, regardless of their place in life and I can tell you that Cowley employees want every student to experience success. How that success is measured depends on the individual.

Micah Fry from Arkansas City is our 2012-13 Student of the Year. What a smart and talented young woman! The graphic design/mass communications major was also the school's September, 2012 Student of the Month.

Natural Science Department instructor, Melinda Neal, was selected as the eighth recipient of the Endowed Chair for Teaching Excellence and Student Learning, and was also named the recipient of the Paul Stirnaman Memorial Award for Teaching Excellence.

This report includes many other wonderful highlights from the past year. I invite you to read through it carefully. It is my hope that it will give you a better understanding of what Cowley is all about and the direction we're heading.

On behalf of our Board of Trustees, my fellow administrators, our faculty, staff and students, I want to thank you for your support of Cowley County Community College. It means a great deal to me. The college has been a viable asset to Arkansas City, Cowley County, and south-central Kansas for more than 90 years. We will do our very best to keep it that way.

Sincerely,

N. Clark Williams

Board Chairman Ron Godsey thanked Avery and Bacastow, Jr. for their dedication and service to the Board and presented them with a gift from the college. Avery served on the Board since July of 1998, while Bacastow served more than 25 years and was the Chairman of the Board when it hired longtime president Dr. Patrick J. McAtee, who retired Dec.

31, 2012.

With Avery and Bacastow, Jr. on the Board, the college added several new buildings to its main campus in Arkansas City and opened new Centers and buildings in Wichita and Mulvane.

"Serving on the Board has been a great experience," Bacastow, Jr. said. "I have had the pleasure of serving with many wonderful people. I have watched the college grow four or five fold all the while providing excellent education. It was a true joy to serve while Dr. McAtee was president. We had many great experiences together. I hope that I have in some way contributed to the college."

Avery will miss serving on the Board but takes great pride in being a part of the team that supported Dr. McAtee as well as hiring his successor, Mr. N. Clark Williams.

She is also proud of the recognition the college has received at both the state and national levels as an AQIP college. "Student success is the core of all that Cowley College does, and I take pride in the many opportunities given me to watch that process mature," Avery said. "I feel confident that Cowley College will not miss a step in its race into the future."

Cowley College, Baker sign articulation agreement

Cowley College has partnered with Baker University in Baldwin City, KS, to better assist students planning to continue their education, as officials from both schools signed an articulation agreement. The agreement between Cowley College and Baker's College of Arts and Sciences is designed to improve the transition process for students, enabling them to transfer their credit hours from Cowley to Baker. While Baker welcomes applications for admission from any student, the agreement pertains to students who earn an Associate of Arts (A.A.) or Associate of Science (A.S.) degree at Cowley.

"This agreement is a great articulation for our students who want to continue their education at a fine university," Slade Griffiths, Cowley College vice president of academic affairs said. "Baker offers a wide variety of four year degrees that are excellent and geared for our graduates." Mark Bandre, vice president for enrollment management and student development at Baker University, is pleased the articulation agreement will provide Cowley College students the opportunity to seamlessly transfer their credits to the Baldwin City campus.

"This initiative will create more opportunities for students at two-year colleges in the region as they become more aware of Baker's degree and major offerings," Bandre said.

Wellness Center creates new classroom space

Looking to create classroom space for expanded offerings at the Ben Cleveland Wellness Center a new classroom was created in what is now the weight room. Along with the new classroom space, the Wellness Center received new cardio equipment and new weights.

Cowley College maintenance staff did most of the work in creating the classroom space along with Central Electric and Schneider Construction. Sparks Music will be in charge of installing the audio system in the classroom.

The Ben Cleveland Wellness Center is located at 201 W. Fifth Avenue in Arkansas City and is open to Cowley College students, employees, and the general public. "This space will allow us to offer long-requested classes such as yoga, zumba, and other aerobic type activities," Cowley College executive vice president of business services Tony Crouch said.

The Wellness Center is offering Dynamic Fitness classes, which began Sept. 1. The Dynamic Fitness classes are Instructor driven organized group classes. Classes are open to anyone and registration is underway.

Gina McKown, Wellness Center director, said offering group fitness classes in the Wellness Center had long been a dream of hers.

Successful teacher and coach named Outstanding Tiger Alumnus

A celebrated student-athlete at Arkansas City Junior College in the 1950s and a successful tennis coach at Independence High School, Jack King was named Cowley College's 2013 Outstanding Tiger Alumnus.

Ben Schears, vice president for institutional advancement/student affairs, said each year the Cowley College Endowment Association selects an alumnus for this honor based upon their efforts at bringing recognition and pride to the college community through their career achievements, service to their community, and support to the Endowment Association. "Jack really has a heart for the success of the college and we are pleased to be able to present this award to him," Schears said. "To give you an example of his zeal, last time we met up he was sporting black and orange throughout his suit, even down to his orange socks. He's a tiger inside and out."

Standing only 5-foot-7, King was unsure that he would ever get an opportunity to play college basketball.

King, who lettered in basketball each of his four years at Winfield High School, went on to join the U.S. Navy. He was offered a scholarship to play basketball at Purdue University after he was to complete his stint in the Navy. However, his time in the Navy was cut short, as he had to return home to help with the family business when his father suffered a stroke.

After two years of tending to the family business, his father's health improved enough to where King could look into going to college.

At the time, he was married and had two children. However, with his dream of playing college basketball rekindled, King approached Dan Kahler, who at the time was the head basketball coach at ACJC, about the possibility of playing for the Tigers. Kahler responded by giving the 5-foot-7 King a scholarship. He not only went on to play basketball at Arkansas City Junior College, but he was the captain of the 1952-53 team that finished as the national runner-up. King, along with another 5-foot-7 guard named Lafayette Norwood, teamed to help ACJC go 29-5 during the 1952-53 season.

"Lafayette and I revitalized the fast break and were as quick as you could find on the court," King said. "Dan Kahler's coaching gave us the push we needed. Dan was a great coach and individual; we were real close."

After playing at ACJC, King joined Norwood and Ray Potter at Southwestern College in Winfield. There, he helped the Moundbuilders reach the NAIA Tournament in Kansas City for the first time since 1939.

"I felt I had to prove myself because of being small," King said.

After graduating from Southwestern College, King received his master's degree in the field of Social Science from Northwestern Oklahoma State.

"My goal was to be a teacher," King said. "I had also played sports all my life, so I also wanted to get into coaching."

King went on to coach football, baseball, basketball, track and tennis, and served as a social science and physical education instructor during his 30-year career in education.

While coaching high school tennis at Independence from 1970-1985, King's teams captured 16 league championships (nine girls, seven boys), and qualified for the state tournament a combined 22 times (13 girls, nine boys). His girls' teams also strung together 61 straight dual victories, which still stands as a school record.

"I told our players that once you put those school colors on give it everything you got," King said.

His life-long accomplishments earned him a spot in the Tiger Athletic Hall of Fame in 2004.

King looks back fondly on his time at ACJC.

"I have got so many friendships that originated from my time at the junior college," King said. "I have great memories and had great times spent at the college. If it wasn't for the junior college and the players on the basketball team, I don't think I would be as successful as I turned out to be. They were a part of my new beginning in life."

King and his wife Marcia, who was the tennis coach at Independence Middle School for more than 20 years, gave private tennis lessons for over 30 years. He and Marcia reside in Independence and have three children: Roger, Marilyn, and Jeff.

Being named the Outstanding Tiger Alumnus is an honor King does not take lightly. He stays connected with his alma mater and hopes to serve as an inspiration to other young students trying to find their way.

"I love this school and I love the town," King said. "I contribute to the school to hopefully stimulate someone to have the same feeling I had when I first started as a student-athlete."

A full story and detailed list of 2013 Military Friendly Schools® was highlighted in the annual G.I. Jobs Guide to Military Friendly Schools®, distributed in print and digital format to hundreds of thousands of active and former military personnel.

PTK named Five Star Chapter

Fulfilling all requirements to be named a Five Star Chapter, the Alpha Gamma Upsilon Chapter of Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society at Cowley College received special commendation during the Kansas Regional Convention. The chapter was also recognized at the Society's recent Annual Convention and is recognized on the Society website at www.ptk.org. The Five Star Chapter Development Plan serves as a blueprint for developing a strong chapter, improves student engagement on your campus, and recognizes progress in the attainment of goals set by the chapter. Using the Five Star Plan as a guide, chapters enhance their strategies to recognize eligible students, provide significant personal and professional development opportunities for members through Honors in Action, and build a working relationship with the college administration by becoming active on campus and in the community. As chapters reach these milestones they progress through each level of the Five Star Plan, ultimately reaching the pinnacle Five Star Level. "On behalf of the outstanding chapter members and advisors of the Alpha Gamma Upsilon Chapter, we express appreciation for your efforts toward providing rewarding educational experiences inside and outside the classroom," Rod A. Risley, Ph.D, executive director and CEO of Phi Theta Kappa, said in a statement sent to the college. Deborah Layton and Scott Layton serve as PTK sponsors on the college's main campus in Arkansas City, while Chad Killblane is the PTK sponsor for the school's Mulvane Center. "The sponsors and members were very excited to be awarded the Five Star status again," Deborah Layton said. "It's a multi-step process that takes a lot of commitment, so we're delighted about the recognition."

Cowley College welcomes new president, Mr. N. Clark Williams

On July 8, 2013, Mr. N. Clark Williams became the fourth president of Cowley College since its inception in 1922.

He comes to the college from Blue Mountain Community College in Pendleton, Oregon, a two-year public institution that enrolls more than 2,700 students at five locations, which collectively trace a 150-mile arc across five counties and more than 18,000 square miles of mountains and valleys in rural northeastern Oregon. As the vice president for operations, his duties spanned the traditional duties of a chief operating officer, a chief administrative officer, a chief financial officer, and a chief technology officer as well as the senior executive responsibilities for student services and student affairs, the leadership of the college's four branch campuses, the construction and maintenance of facilities, and the operation of auxiliary enterprises.

During his five-year tenure at Blue Mountain Community College, Williams was active in a broad range of activities. He introduced and institutionalized financial and strategic planning at the college and was instrumental in preserving the college's programs, salaries, and jobs – while at the same time tripling the college's financial reserves – during the worst economic recession since the Great Depression. He oversaw the construction and commissioning of a $10-million classroom and laboratory building in Hermiston, Oregon. He was a principal architect and a leader of bold new initiatives for student success. He managed the development of the college's first master facilities plan and oversaw the development of the college's first master technology plan, which together will serve as the basis for a $30-million facilities-improvement bond that will go to the voters in May 2014. In addition, he was a peer evaluator for the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities, which is the regional accreditation authority for colleges and universities in the Great Northwest.

Williams is an educator with management and organizational skills not only in college administration but also in business, industry, and the military. His experience includes enterprise governance, corporate leadership, program management, industrial operations, regulatory compliance, and business development. Previously, Williams was a founder and the president of The DecisionWorks Inc. and the president of Impact Forecasting LLC, two science and engineering companies that specialize in helping decision makers to understand the risks they face and to improve the strategic and operational decisions they make to manage the risks. He served as director of laboratory program integration & chief of staff to the laboratory director for Lockheed Martin Idaho Technologies Company, which managed and operated the Idaho National Laboratory for the United States Department of Energy.

Williams graduated from the United States Naval Academy with a Bachelor of Science. He served in the Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program as a submariner, and after leaving active duty he remained engaged in naval affairs as a member of the United States Naval Reserve, retiring with the rank of Captain, USNR-R. Williams earned a Master of Science in Engineering-Economic Systems at Stanford University, where he spent nearly two years as a decision analyst at Stanford Research Institute (SRI). While at SRI, he co-authored "The Trials and Tribulations of the Tribnian Situation: A Pilot-Level Decision Analysis of Intelligence Resource Allocation," a research report that is widely acknowledged as one of the first important applications of decision analysis to the problem of resource allocation under conditions of uncertainty. Williams is an Oregon native, and his wife, Lou, was born and raised in Illinois. Their four grown children – Stewart, Maggie, Eric, and Carl – and their families live and work in San Francisco, Chicago, and Boston.

Neal receives teaching honors

After being named Cowley College's Endowed Chair for Teaching Excellence, Natural Science Department instructor Melinda Neal added another honor to her collection as she was named the recipient of the Paul Stirnaman Memorial Award for Teaching Excellence. The award is named for Paul Stirnaman, a long-time Social Science Department instructor and strong supporter of the College Education Association. He died

June 16, 2000, following a lengthy illness. "The Paul Stirnaman award exemplifies the professional standards that all instructors strive for and I am very honored to be this year's recipient," Neal said. Neal previously received an Excellence Award from the National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development in 2008 and was the recipient of the March, 2008 Horizon Award Faculty Advisor for the Phi Theta Kappa Kansas Region. She also received the March, 2009 Paragon Award for the Phi Theta Kappa Kansas

Region, and was the recipient of the March, 2008 and 2010 Honorable Mention Paragon Advisor Award for the Phi Theta Kappa Kansas Region. While serving as the PTK co-advisor, the club received numerous awards and achieved Five Star status several times. Slade Griffiths, Cowley College vice president of academic affairs, said Neal is very deserving of the Stirnaman award. "She tirelessly works to help students and faculty. She is appreciated by all," Griffiths said.

Cowley finishes 10th in standings

Continuing to demonstrate tremendous success in athletics, Cowley College finished 10th during the 2012-13 season in the NATYCAA (National Alliance of Two-Year College Athletic Administrators) Cup standings, which recognizes excellence in two-year college athletics. The NATYCAA Cup program was begun in 2004 and was previously sponsored by Pepsi. This program recognizes excellence in two-year college athletics based on success in championship competition. Points for the NATYCAA Cup are calculated based on each colleges finish at NJCAA Tournaments. Each first place finish is worth 20 points, second place 19, third 18, and so on. Total scores for both men's and women's programs are combined for their total score. A total of 206 community college's registered points in the standings.

For the fifth consecutive year, Iowa Central Community College won the scholarship division of the NATYCAA Cup. The 10th place finish marks the seventh straight year that Cowley athletics have placed in the top-10 of the NATYCAA Cup standings. "Tradition marches on is the way I look at it," Cowley College interim athletic director Dave Burroughs said. "This represents a job well done by our coaches, who take pride in their program."
